Charley Mann says he didn't know any one was so durned "low down" as to steal a dead dog, but such was the case. Last week an auto killed a large shepherd dog in front of his residence, and the health officer told him he would give him one "plunk" if he would bury it. So last Sunday morning he got up at 3:30 and dug a grave 4 feet deep and then went to get the dog, but behold, he was gone. Charley says he will give one "plunk" for the return of the dog to its grave back of his barn.
